The Need for Training

Births in community settings, and community services in general, are gaining more attention as an option for some low risk mums (The Birthplace Study, 2014; NICE, 2014), and to support continuity of care for mums (Better Births, 2016).

Despite this, community-specific training, where resources are low, seems to be rarely provided for community-based healthcare professionals.

For those who attend planned or unplanned births in the community such as community midwives, independent midwives, paramedics, MCAs, GPs and practice development midwives.

Course Directors

Michelle Keeler

Interim Matron for Maternity, Medway NHS Foundation Trust

Kirstie Savege

Outpatient Matron, Princess Alexandra Hospital NHS Trust

For speaker details please visit individual course pages on website.

Course Content

This one-day course will review and update on important elements in the management of emergency skills that may be needed when women birth at home.

It will include:

- Vaginal breech birth.
- Neonatal resuscitation.
- Cord prolapse (to include case discussion).
- Shoulder dystocia (also in water birth).
- Maternal collapse.
- Postpartum haemorrhage (PPH).
- A physiological birth session (paramedics only).
- Communication in a pre-hospital obstetric emergency.
- Profession-specific workstations – communication with the 999 team, midwifery jargon-busting.

Feedback

97% of delegates rated 'Very Good' or 'Excellent' for overall quality of education.

96% reported that they intended to modify practice in a minor or major way following the course.

"Would recommend to any midwife but should be essential in all trusts as part of mandatory training."

"It's these kinds of days that make midwifery safer for women by making sure we are updated in emergencies."

"A very thought provoking day for a paramedic. Made me realise how much I didn't know that I should."
